FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE

This is disclosed only to professional boxers that the boxing promoter has a promotional contract with – this does not have to be disclosed to the Indiana State Athletic Commission. Each professional boxer would only see his own disclosure. Also, you as the boxing promoter would only disclose the dollar figure to those professional boxers “primarily” responsible for generating the income. For example, if professional boxers A and B are the main event and this is the only professional boxing bout being shown of television, then you would only disclose to professional boxers A and B your television revenues. For advertising revenue, if only professional boxer A is required to wear that particular advertisement, then disclosure of this revenue would only be to professional boxer A. If all professional boxers were required to wear the advertisement, then disclosure would be required to all the professional boxers. Gate receipts should be disclosed to all professional boxers. For site fees, if your contract states that the site fee is only for the main event(s), then this revenue would be disclosed only to the professional boxers involved.

As the boxing promoter of the above named professional boxing event, I have received the following compensation or considerations resulting from your professional boxing bout.

ITEM	MONEY RECEIVED	RECEIVED FROM
Site Fee
Television Revenue
Pay-per-View Revenue
Ticket Sales
Advertising or Sponsorships
Other Revenue (describe):

* Because you as the boxing promoter may not have exact figures, the figures should be your best estimates at the time of disclosure. For example if you as the boxing promoter are receiving 35% of the Pay-per-View buys at $29.95 per buy you would list in the column 35% per buy at $29.95 per buy. For gate receipts, list 100% (or a percentage you are receiving) of ticket sales. For television revenue, list the amount on the television contract. For advertising and sponsorships, list the amount that is being given to you by the advertiser pertaining to this particular professional boxing event.
